I first gained an interest in web development a few years ago when I created my first website. Although it was only made using HTML and looked rather basic, creating something digitally using my own intuition and seeing it displayed on a computer screen gave me an incredible sense of excitement and accomplishment. Viewing myself as a creative person with a fair amount of computing knowledge, I soon came to realise that web development perfectly aligned with my skill set. It has since then offered an engaging challenge to continually learn and improve my skills in creating high-quality websites and web-based applications.

Web Development Experience

- Developed the front end for multiple mobile-friendly websites using HTML, CSS and React
- Built web applications that fetch data from third party APIs
- Developed a file uploading web application with a back-end server using Bootstrap, Node.js and Express
- Created a fast food web application which stores customer information via MongoDB, built with HTML, CSS, JavaScript, React, Node.js and Express for front and back-end
